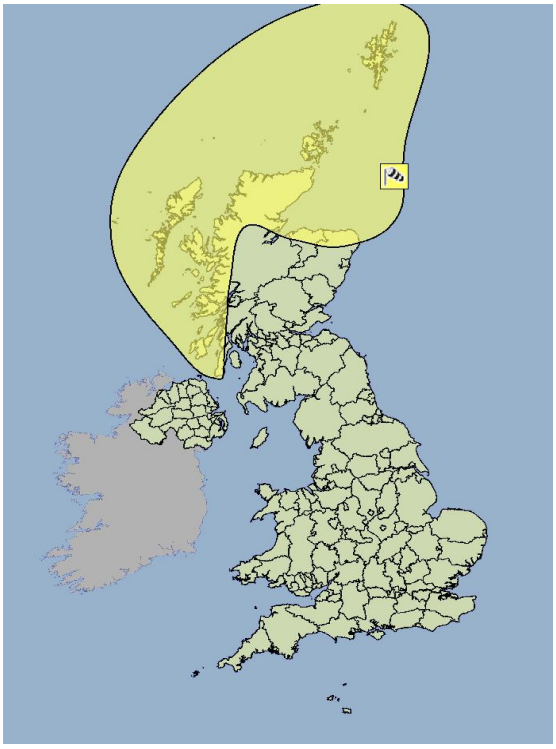
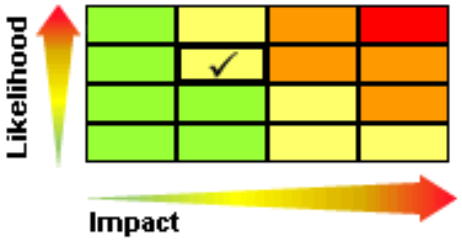
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Storm Conor is expected to pass to the north of Shetland on Boxing Day bringing a broad swathe of gales and severe gales to the northern and western parts of Scotland.

It will turn much colder early on Boxing Day, with blustery showers, some thundery, increasingly turning to snow away from exposed coasts. Local accumulations are likely in places, particularly on high ground. Please see separate warning for snow.

This warning has been updated to adjust the area covered to northern and western Scotland and to remove the reference to rain and snow melt.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Wind

Valid from 00:05 on Mon, 26th Dec 2016 until 18:00 on Mon, 26th Dec 2016

Further very strong winds, associated with Storm Conor, are expected through much of Boxing Day (Monday). Gusts of 50 to 60 mph are likely to occur quite widely, locally up to 70 mph. These stronger gusts are likely to be more frequent over the far north of Scotland, where there is a risk of gusts of up to 80 mph. Winds will ease from west to east through the afternoon and evening. Frequent wintry showers will be an additional hazard across northern Scotland.

Please be aware of the potential for disruption to travel (for example difficult driving conditions, restrictions on bridges and delays to ferry services). Other impacts may include large waves affecting primarily western coastal areas.
